

Dr. Michael J. Selgelid
Senior Lecturer & Deputy Director, Centre for Human Bioethics
Monash University, Clayton, Australia

Michael J. Selgelid earned a B.S. in Biomedical Engineering from Duke University and a Ph.D. in Philosophy from the University of California, San Diego. He is a Senior Lecturer and Deputy Director of the Centre for Human Bioethics at Monash University in Melbourne. He was previously a Senior Research Fellow in the Centre for Applied Philosophy and Public Ethics (CAPPE) at the Australian National University, where he was also Deputy Director of the National Centre for Biosecurity, and where he continues to serve as Director of a World Health Organization Collaborating Centre for Bioethics. He serves on the Ethics Review Board of Médecins Sans Frontières. His research primarily focuses on ethical issues associated with infectious diseases and biotechnology. With over 100 publications in bioethics, including his co-authorship of Ethical and Philosophical Consideration of the Dual-Use Dilemma in the Biological Sciences (Springer 2008) and lead co-editor of Ethics and Infectious Disease (Blackwell, 2006), Health Rights (Ashgate 2010), and Infectious Disease Ethics (Springer 2011). Additionally, he edits a book series in Public Health Ethics Analysis for Springer.